President's Report

Phil Sidles

It seems that the world is finally starting to realize the true definition of essential. Celebrity's opinions don't seem to matter much anymore and the time we spend with the ones we love seems so precious. To say these are interesting times is definitely an understatement. Things that once seemed important are not as important anymore and things we used to take for granted are now becoming more and more important with each passing day. The "normal" we once knew has drastically changed and we can only hope we all come out of this better human beings.

As I am writing this, we are preparing to put the crop in the ground with the idea of hope for the future, but seems at this time and place we live hour by hour, day by day. Covid-19 has turned the world that we once knew upside down. We face new challenges never seen before, but the one thing that remains true is the fact that farmers will come together and get the job done. It maybe a little different than what we are used to, but we will adapt and overcome. For me, it has meant a lot of hands on learning for the next generation of farmers - which is one of the few silver linings from all of this. Another thing I have noticed is a new appreciation for the teachers, grocery clerks, truck drivers, bankers, and many others that at one time were looked over or "expected" in our everyday lives, but now they are so much more.

I hope, by the time this reaches everyone, some sort of normalcy has returned to the world, but only time will tell. During these difficult and strange times, Farm Bureau has been working diligently to put the needs of farmers and members at the forefront. Politically, we have been working locally, making sure farmers in Sangamon County can continue to do what they need to do while keeping themselves and the public safe. We have been in close contact with state officials monitoring and weighing in on ideas for the rural and Ag communities. All while working step by step with the federal agencies to ensure when all of this is behind us, farmers and ranchers will come out of this whole and be able to continue working to a prosperous future. There has never been a more important time to focus on our true priorities of keeping safe and healthy.

I hope that you and your family are continuing to stay well while practicing social distancing. The faster we can flatten the curve, the faster we can return to "normal." Stay healthy and have a wonderful planting season!

Janet Edwards

Happy Spring All!! A little too cheery to start an article with? Could be but, with spring and the SUNNY warm day we are having as I write this, we have the hope of something new!! These last few months have been very trying for everyone but with God's help we will all get through these tough times and carry on. Yes, we at the Sangamon County Farm Bureau along with your families have had to adapt to new and different ways to carry on business. We have had to postpone and even cancel some activities that had been planned during this time but we are continuing, just as you are, to go on with life and be ready to get out again when this all passes.

Trivia Night was postponed and hopefully will soon be able to be held. The AgVenture barn to the schools was also cancelled but with the help of several Farm Bureau members' families and local FFA students, a "virtual" barn was made to carry on agricultural education to the youth who do not always know about farm animals. It may not have been "hands on" but it still carried the message of agricultural education to the public.

When this issue comes out, we will have gotten past the "social distancing" of April. Who knows what May and June will bring for us but we will get through it together. Farmers are still out in the fields working ground and planting the 2020 crop.

We are still planning the annual Foundation Golf Outing in July. AgStravaganza is still being planned for the July 26th and 27th which this year will be held at the park in Sherman. We are looking forward to bringing this event to a different part of the county so that we can continue to educate the public and students about farm life and safety. We are always looking for volunteers to help with this event and if you would like to help please let me or the office know and we will add you to our volunteer list for this event.

In closing, I would like to take this time to ask all to say a little prayer for our leaders, medical personnel, first responders, grocery clerks, gas station attendants, truck drivers, and anyone else who has had to be away from their families during this time to keep us all safe and fed. Without them we would not be able to carry on. Last but not least, say a little prayer for you, the farmer, and your families because we will always carry on to feed this nation and thank God everyday that we are able to do so.

Till we all can gather as a group again, God Bless and stay safe!!

Committee Reports

Matt Heissinger

While our committee has been unable to offer some of our planned programs in recent and upcoming weeks, we'll be moving them back and try to hold them after all of the virus restrictions are past. That said, there's still lots of activity at the federal level that affects the business side of farming. Farm Bureau is working to get a fix for CCC loan applications. Those that haven't already used CCC loans in recent years are experiencing difficulty getting one because the federal government requires new applicants to have a loan history check through the state office of the Secretary of State. Since they're offices are closed, those checks cannot be completed. A fix is in the works and hopefully those of you who are considering first time CCC loan applications will be able to get one. As far as commodity and livestock market declines go,

Corn prices: Ethanol plants account for approximately 1/3 of the demand for Illinois corn. Current ethanol production is at its lowest level in over six years and this has lowered ethanol plants' corn bids. Corn prices have dropped by more than 10% since mid-February and the May futures contract has dropped 15%, or 61 cents per bushel, since January 14.

Pork and beef prices: COVID-19 has been driving a dramatic realignment of the supply chain for pork and beef. Prior to COVID-19, institutional buyers, corporate cafeterias, schools and restaurant chains were a large part of final demand for the meat complex. With COVID-19, institutional demand has collapsed. Supermarkets account for a much larger share of meat purchases and processing, packaging, meat cuts, and delivery chains have all had to adjust in order to meet this new direct demand at the retail level. This has created backlogs at slaughter-packing facilities even while supermarket prices have risen. Additionally, the market has been reflecting the potential risk of slaughter plants being temporarily shuttered due to COVID-19, which would result in even greater supply chain backlogs.

Although COVID-19 is often cited as playing a primary role in the commodity price declines, there have been several contributing factors outside of the pandemic:

- Increased value of the U.S. dollar. The value of the Brazilian Real depreciated by nearly 10% and the Argentinian Peso by 6% against the USD since mid-January. This makes their soybeans and corn cheaper on the world market compared to ours.
- Brazil's record soybean harvest, combined with their devalued currency, has resulted in larger Brazil exports and a lower world price.
- Pork producers have been over-supplying the market throughout 2020 in anticipation of purchases from China of a magnitude that have been less than expected.
- Corn exports have been struggling due to both a strong US dollar and a large Brazil crop on its way, in addition to US farmers' planting intentions that would indicate a large US corn crop.

We will keep you informed with any updates. At this time, please be safe and we will see you soon!

Cassie Bennett

Hello SCFB members! Boy oh boy what a different planting season this has been! I hope this article finds you all safe and well. As you are aware our Spring Fling was canceled, but we are definitely looking into rescheduling when everything gets back to normal.

WOMEN'S

Our AgVenture Barn Tour was also canceled but we put together a Virtual Barn Tour in place of it! We are hopeful that our Bus Trip on May 28th will still be on. Check out the flyer in this issue. I hope everyone has a safe planting season and stays safe!

Stephen Prather

What a past couple of months it has been! Back when we were able to conduct business we had our FFA Acquaintance Day with Pleasant Plains, Tri-City, and New Berlin FFA Chapters. We are looking forward to our Annual Antique Tractor Drive during the Sangamon County Fair on June 20th. Look for the flyer in this issue and please share it with your friends! We have a lot of great programs coming this summer and we are excited to get those rolling. Until then, be safe as spring field work continues and in all that you do.

YOUNG LEADERS

MARKETING

Allen Entwistle

As Congress continues its work to provide forms of relief to Americans during the pandemic. I thought I'd attach some highlights of the CARES act that applies to farmers. If you have questions about any particular item, please contact our office and our manager will be happy to get you further information.

The package provides a lot of flexibility for the USDA to develop programs to assist farmers. As Secretary Perdue looks to utilize these funds, he is communicating broadly with agricultural leaders from every state. We are conveying our members' most pressing needs and discussing with neighboring states opportunities to support the renewable fuels market and livestock producers.

Agriculture program highlights are as follows:

- $14 billion to replenish the Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC) to a full $30 billion ahead of June 30, when it is typically done. CCC funding is flexible.
- $9.5 billion to prevent, prepare for, and respond to COVID-19 by providing support to impacted agricultural products, including specialty growers, producers who supply local food systems including farmers' markets, and livestock producers including dairy farmers.
- Section 11003 – The Secretary may extend the terms of a marketing assistance loan for any loan commodity up to 12 months (authority expires 9/30/2020).

Small Business Administration:

- $10 billion is set aside for the Small Business Administration to administer programs. The SBA COVID-19 web-page details programs, eligibility requirements, and paperwork.
- Agricultural enterprises that employ 500 or fewer people whose principal place of residence is in the United States are eligible to apply for the Paycheck Protection Program (PPP), regardless of revenue levels. The PPP loan can be fully forgiven if funds are used for payroll costs, interest on mortgages, rent and utilities (75% must be used for payroll to be fully forgiven. You can find that application here.
- The American Farm Bureau Federation reviewed the interim final rule for the PPP and has provided their analysis here: www.fb.org/market-intel/update-ag-and-pppl.
- (April 7, 2020) The U.S. Treasury has provided an FAQ on the Paycheck Protection Program, which you can find here.
- (April 7, 2020) USDA has provided an FAQ on ag eligibility for the Paycheck Protection Program here.
- (April 9, 2020) The American Banker's Association has created a FAQ on the Paycheck Protection Program.

Farmer provisions can be found on pgs 17-18.

Employee Tax Credit

The IRS has also made available an Employee Retention Tax Credit for those who pay family or medical leave for employees who are unable to work or telework due to the COVID-19 pandemic. However, an employer may claim the leave tax credits and the CARES Act Employee Retention Credit — but not for the same wages paid. Members should review the tax credits available for midsize and small businesses for providing paid leave.

THE BUREAU ACCORDING TO JIM

Jim Birge

It's really nice to see some work getting done in the fields after all that has been going on with COVID-19. This temporary new norm has been a struggle and challenge for most everyone. But the interesting thing that has happened is that we are all learning to do our work in different ways than we thought possible. For Sangamon County Farm Bureau that has meant physically closing the office, staff taking turns answering forwarded phones, mostly working from home, and lots of conference calls or video conference calls. Once we figured out how to get the majority of our work done remotely, we're still able to serve most all of our members needs. Sadly, we aren't seeing all the people in person and we miss those interactions. But they'll soon return.

There's been a lot of activity for Farm Bureau to work with at the state and national levels. Making sure farmers are allowed to conduct their work and have opportunities to address significantly under-performing markets for both grain and livestock has been of high priority. You can read more on what's happening in the Governmental Engagement & Policy Committee report and the Marketing Committee report in this issue.

Until next time when hopefully we'll have returned to some normalcy, be safe as you go about the important business of planting and caring for your crops and livestock. We appreciate all you do for our country and world.

The Best Tool for Helping Others Through Stress

By: Adrienne DeSutter

Would you know what to say to a farmer you were concerned about?

Last Spring, my husband came home after a tough night on the farm. Equipment trouble had kept him from getting into the fields as early as he'd hoped, and after he finally got things rolling, a downpour stopped him from finishing the field...with only ONE pass left to plant. He was frustrated, tired, and feeling defeated.

When he walked in the door, I greeted him with my typical "how was your day, dear?" and he unloaded, sparing no unpleasant detail. As a concerned wife, I went straight into problem-solving mode: "You couldn't have just sped up and planted it anyway? What if you just leave it unplanted and call it done? Maybe next time you should take the meteorologist a little more seriously."

As you can imagine, this approach wasn't helpful. But problem-solving is unfortunately the first thing we do when we're trying to help people. We want to fix the problems that are causing stress- because we care, and we want them to feel better- so we jump right into giving our 'expert' advice. And if we don't think we can provide good advice or resources, we just don't say anything at all.

Whether someone is having a tough day (like my husband), or going through a serious mental health challenge, there's a tool we can use that's even more effective than slapping on duct tape: we can empathize. By definition, empathy means "the ability to understand and share the feelings of another" (Oxford English Dictionary). It means listening, connecting, imagining what it would be like to go through an experience, and acknowledging that a person's feelings are valid, even if they're different than yours.

When talking with someone you're concerned about, worry less about what to say and more about showing genuine empathy. Be an active listener, paying close attention to what he/she is really saying. Don't be afraid to make honest statements, like "I'm concerned about you," or "I hear you, and I'm sorry this is happening." If you don't know what to say, that's ok too: "I'm not sure what to say right now, but I want you to know that it's ok to be upset about this." Even sharing any changes you've seen can be helpful: "I noticed you haven't been sticking around much to chat like you used to, is everything going ok?" You might have to provoke conversation more than once, because as we know, it's tough for tough people (like farmers) to open up.

One of the coolest things about empathy is that you don't even have to agree with someone to empathize with them. It isn't about sharing your thoughts or feelings, it's about recognizing that thoughts and feelings vary. It's more important to express that there's no right or wrong way to feel, and you don't think any less of them because of what they're going through.

The worst thing you can do, is nothing. Don't ignore the feeling in your gut that something might be wrong, don't hope someone else will take care of the issue because you're not sure what to say, and don't wait for the distressed person to ask for help. Statistically, those in need of help the most are the least likely to ask for it, and they need us to be proactive.

Remember, you don't have to be a doctor or a therapist to help someone going through a crisis. In fact, one of the first and most emphasized skills that therapists learn during their training is empathy; not problem-solving, not finding resources, but helping their client feel heard, validated, and understood.

However, just as we would never be expected to fix someone's broken leg or cure their flu, we should recognize that the same provisions apply to someone living with a mental health condition. We play a critical role as "first responders" when crisis occurs, but it's important to help a person seek professional help if he/she exhibits signs of depression, anxiety, or suicidal thoughts. Calling a primary care doctor, a crisis hotline, or a therapist is necessary, and if you believe someone's life is in imminent danger, dial 911 immediately.

Think about the last time you were stressed; what did you want to hear? Next time my husband has a tough day on the farm, I'll pull empathy out of my toolbox instead of problem-solving. Chances are, helping him feel understood will go much further in reducing stress than any amount of advice I could give.

Cultivate a productive mindset

-  Use Self-Talk | The body hears what the mind thinks. So, choose your thoughts with purpose. Tell yourself that you can overcome any challenge. You can adapt. You can do it.
-  Use your Breath | When faced with a challenge, first use your breath. Deep breathing calms the mind and can help you focus. Combine deep breathing with self-talk to boost productivity.
-  Use Acceptance | When things are beyond your control, the most productive step you can take is to accept it. Try making the word "accept" part of your self-talk and using deep breathing as a time to pause, accept, and begin problem solving.
